

Review of Adrian Tchaikovsky's book Saturation Point

by Jacob Williams on 2025-02-15

feedback is welcome at jacob@brokensandals.net

The setting is a neat idea: an area where climate change has led to the humidity always being too high for humans to survive. And I like the twist at the end: the other species of human has been infiltrating society outside the Zone and will be sending someone to impersonate the protagonist. I was never especially invested in the characters or the plot, though.